Research Guide to insolvency and liquidation records at Queensland State Archives

Queensland State Archives (QSA) is the official repository for Queensland Government records selected for permanent retention because of their continuing value. The archived public records are from state government departments, state courts, local government authorities and statutory authorities. Queensland State Archives holds insolvency and liquidation records. Insolvency is a financial condition experienced by an individual or business entity when their liabilities exceed their assets and debt obligations are unable to be met. Liquidation refers to the process by which a company (or part of a company) is brought to an end, and the assets and property of the company are redistributed. Liquidation can also be referred to as winding-up or dissolution. Legally declared insolvency is called bankruptcy. When a person, business or partnership with unlimited liability is unable to pay debts as they become due, the debtor or the creditors may petition the Supreme Court to make arrangements for the settlement of debts. For more information about insolvencies and liquidations, refer to the Australian Securities & Investments Commission webpage about regulatory resources.

Insolvency records date approximately from the separation of the Colony of Queensland from New South Wales in 1859. The Moreton Bay Supreme Court Act 1857 included the appointment of an official Assignee of Insolvent Estates. Liquidation records date from the Insolvency Act 1874. In 1928, responsibility for bankruptcy matters was transferred from the state government to the federal government. Initially, records of all liquidations and insolvencies were filed in the Brisbane Registry of the Supreme Court. However, with the establishment of separate Supreme Court Districts and registries, files were registered in the relevant district. The years when the separate Supreme Court registries were established are Northern District, Bowen in 1875, transferred to Townsville in 1889; Central District, Rockhampton in 1896; and, Southern District, Brisbane in 1857.

When searching for information on persons unable to pay their debts it may be necessary to check both the insolvency and liquidation records. Usually the insolvency and liquidation files include the petition for the insolvency or liquidation, the debtor's statement of affairs, lists of creditors and proof of amounts owed, minutes and resolutions of meetings of creditors, appointments of Trustees, bills of costs, affidavits of creditors and in some cases a certificate of discharge of the debtor.
